

The Drinking Water Program: An Overview

The EPA established the Public Water System Supervision (PWSS) Program under the authority of the 1974 Safe Drinking Water Act (SDWA). Under the SDWA and the 1986 Amendments, EPA sets national limits on contaminant levels in drinking water to ensure that the water is safe for human consumption. These limits are known as Maximum Contaminant Levels (MCLs). For some regulations, EPA establishes treatment techniques in lieu of an MCL to control unacceptable levels of contaminants in water. The Agency also regulates how often public water systems (PWSs) monitor their water for contaminants and report the monitoring results to the states or EPA. Generally, the larger the population served by a water system, the more frequent the monitoring and reporting (M/R) requirements. In addition, EPA requires PWSs to monitor for unregulated contaminants to provide data for future regulatory development. Finally, EPA requires PWSs to notify their consumers when they have violated these regulations. The 1996 Amendments to the SDWA require consumer notification to include a clear and understandable explanation of the nature of the violation, its potential adverse health effects, steps that the PWS is undertaking to correct the violation and the possibility of alternative water supplies during the violation.

The SDWA applies to the 50 states, the District of Columbia, Indian Lands, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

The SDWA allows states and territories to seek EPA approval to administer their own PWSS Programs. The authority to run a PWSS Program is called primacy. For a state to receive primacy, EPA must determine that the state meets certain requirements laid out in the SDWA and the regulations, including the adoption of drinking water regulations that are at least as stringent as the Federal regulations and a demonstration that they can enforce the program requirements. Of the 56 states and territories, all but Wyoming and the District of Columbia have primacy. The EPA Regional Offices administer the PWSS Programs within these two jurisdictions.

The 1986 SDWA Amendments gave Indian Tribes the right to apply for and receive primacy. EPA currently administers PWSS Programs on all Indian lands except the Navaho Nation, which was granted primacy in late 1999.

Mississippi assumed primacy for the PWSS Program in 1974 with the Mississippi State Department of Health (MSDH) as the primacy agency. The MSDH Division of Water Supply (DWS) assures that safe drinking water is provided to the 2.5 million Mississippians (96 percent of the population) who rely on the state's 1,426 public water supplies. The MSDH/DWS accomplishes this by regulating the engineering design, construction, operation, and maintenance of these water supplies; by enforcing the water quality standards of the Federal and Mississippi Safe Drinking Water Acts; and by ensuring that each community public water supply is maintained by a waterworks operator licensed by MSDH. During 2002, MSDH completed 1,450 sanitary surveys on public water systems, reviewed 1,091 plans for public water systems, and approved the final design of 930 public water supply projects.

Annual State PWS Report

Each quarter, primacy states submit data to the Safe Drinking Water Information System (SDWIS/FED), an automated database maintained by EPA. The data submitted include, but are not limited to, PWS inventory information, the incidence of Maximum Contaminant Level, monitoring, and treatment technique violations; and information on enforcement activity related to these violations. Section 1414(c)(3) of the Safe Drinking Water Act requires states to provide EPA with an annual report of violations of the primary drinking water standards. This report provides the numbers of violations in each of five categories: MCLs, treatment techniques, variances and exemptions, significant monitoring violations, and significant consumer notification violations. The EPA Regional Offices report the information for Wyoming, the District of Columbia, and all Indian Lands but the Navaho Nation. EPA Regional offices also report Federal enforcement actions taken. Data retrieved from SDWIS/FED form the basis of this report.

Public Water System

A Public Water System (PWS) is defined as a system that provides water via piping or other constructed conveyances for human consumption to at least 15 service connections or serves an average of at least 25 people for at least 60 days each year. There are three types of PWSs. PWSs can be community (such as towns), nontransient noncommunity (such as schools or factories), or transient noncommunity systems (such as rest stops or parks). Mississippi currently has 1,197 community water systems, 101 nontransient noncommunity water systems, and 128 transient noncommunity water systems on the active inventory. For this report when the acronym “PWS” is used, it means systems of all types unless specified in greater detail.

Maximum Contaminant Level

Under the Safe Drinking Water Act (SDWA), the EPA sets national limits on contaminant levels in drinking water to ensure that the water is safe for human consumption. These limits are known as Maximum Contaminant Levels (MCLs). During 2002, 57 PWSs incurred 60 MCL violations under the Total Coliform Rule (TCR). 2 systems incurred acute violations for e. coli.

During 2002, 1 PWS incurred a total of 3 violations for exceeding the Total Trihalomethane MCL.

Treatment Techniques

For some regulations, the EPA establishes treatment techniques (TTs) in lieu of an MCL to control unacceptable levels of certain contaminants. For example, treatment techniques have been established for viruses, some bacteria, and turbidity. There were no treatment technique violations for Mississippi PWSs in 2002.

Variances and Exemptions

A primacy state can grant a PWS a variance from a primary drinking water regulation if the characteristics of the raw water sources reasonably available to the PWS do not allow the system to meet the MCL. To obtain a variance, the system must agree to install the best available technology, treatment techniques, or other means of limiting drinking water contamination that the Administrator finds are available (taking costs into account), and the state must find that the variance will not result in an unreasonable risk to public health. The variance shall be reviewed not less than every 5 years to determine if the system remains eligible for the variance.

A primacy state can grant an exemption temporarily relieving a PWS of its obligation to comply with an MCL, treatment technique, or both if the system's noncompliance results from compelling factors (which may include economic factors) and the system was in operation on the effective date of the MCL or treatment technique requirement. The state will require the PWS to comply with the MCL or treatment technique as expeditiously as practicable, but not later than 3 years after the otherwise applicable compliance date.

Currently, the Division of Water Supply does not grant variances or exemptions.

Monitoring

A PWS is required to monitor and verify that the levels of contaminants present in the water do not exceed the MCL. If a PWS fails to have its water tested as required or fails to report test results correctly to the primacy agent, a monitoring violation occurs. In Mississippi, the vast majority of public water supplies submit all samples to the MSDH for analysis at the state laboratory. The water supply collects most of the required samples in containers provided by MSDH. Once analyzed, the results are sent to the public water supply. In 2002, the DWS processed 61,238 water samples submitted for microbiological analysis. Of those, 1346 were positive for total coliform. 29 were positive for e. coli. A total of 540 water samples were rejected for being improperly submitted. In addition to the water samples tested for microbiological contaminants: 1,732 samples were analyzed for Lead and Copper; 2,475 for Nitrate/Nitrite; 1,271 for Inorganics; 710 for Physical/Chemical properties; 749 for Volatile Organic Contaminants (VOCs); 676 for Total Trihalomethanes (TTHMs); 675 for Haloacetic Acids; 31 for Bromates; and 499 for Radiologicals. Most of the water systems in Mississippi have been granted a waiver from monitoring for the SOC's based on previous studies, vulnerability assessments, and chemical use data.

Monitoring Violations (Major/Minor)

For this report, significant monitoring violations are generally defined as any major monitoring violation that occurred during the calendar year of the report. A major monitoring violation occurs when no required routine or resamples were taken or no results were reported during a compliance period. A minor monitoring violation occurs when some but not all of the required number of samples or resamples are taken. In Mississippi during 2002, 29 PWSs incurred a total of 31 major monitoring violations for failure to collect the required routine monthly samples. 11 PWSs incurred 11 minor monitoring violations for collection of some but not all of their routine monthly samples. 4 PWSs incurred 4 major monitoring violations for failing to collect repeat samples following a positive sample. 1 PWS incurred 1 minor monitoring violations for collecting some but not all of the repeat samples required following a positive sample.

Consumer Notification and the Consumer Confidence Report (CCR)

Every Community Water System is required to deliver to its customers a brief annual water quality report. This report includes educational material and provides information on the source water, the levels of any detected contaminants, and compliance with drinking water regulations. The Division of Water Supply compiles sample data for the calendar year and sends this information to all community water supplies in the state so that they may accurately report their data to the customers.

Significant Consumer Notification (CCR) Violations

For this report, a significant public notification violation occurred if a community water system completely failed to provide its customers the required 2001 annual water quality report. July 1, 2002, was the deadline for all systems on inventory to prepare a report, deliver the report to the customers, and certify to the primacy agency (MSDH) that the report was accurately prepared and delivered. 141 water systems failed to prepare and accurately distribute the 2001 Consumer Confidence Report and were issued violations. 32 systems were issued violations for inadequate reporting (i.e., improper format, incomplete information, failure to remit a copy of the report to the primacy agency or failure to certify the manner in which it was made available to their customers).

Boil Water Notices

Boil water notices are issued for many reasons. The primary cause for a boil water notice is loss of water system pressure. Any time a water system experiences a pressure loss, contaminants can be siphoned back into the water distribution system. In 2002, there were 271 boil water notices issued. 163 of these were issued by the water systems or were "self imposed". 97 were self imposed with state assistance on public notification. 11 of the boil water notices issued in 2002 were due to excessive microbiological contamination ("positive" water samples) or inclement weather. During seasonal inclement weather, it is not uncommon for the health department to issue "blanket" boil waters for large sections of the state (i.e. ice storms, flooding). These are issued to ensure the protection of the public.

State Enforcement Actions

During 2002, the DWS issued 60 Notices of Violation (NOVs) for Total Coliform Rule Violations. And 45 NOVs for monitoring violations associated with the total coliform rule. State personnel made 7 compliance visits to water systems that incurred two or more violations of the SDWA. Persistent violator warnings were issued to 3 systems with 3 SDWA violations. No state administrative orders were required to be issued.

Public Water Systems with MCL Violations in 2002

Most of the MCL violations in 2002 were violations of the Total Coliform Rule. Those water systems that exceeded the MCL for coliform are listed along with the month that the water system incurred the violation. Also listed are the Public Notice violations for systems that failed to give public notice for exceeding the MCL for coliform.
